Roy Toft

Your instructor, Roy Toft, is a professional photographer dedicated to documenting our natural world for future generations. He is an accomplished conservation photographer, with a background in wildlife and conservation biology. Roy was awarded this years Gerald Durrell award for Endangered Species in this years BBC Wildlife Photographer of the Year. His images have been featured in National Geographic, Smithsonian, Audubon, Wildlife Conservation, Discover magazines and other notable publications.

Plum Island is a small barrier island just off the extreme northeast coast of Massachusetts and is part of Newbury, Newburyport, Rowley, and Ipswich. The architecture is an almost unbelievable jumble of old beach cottages, comfortable saltboxes, standard residential homes, intriguing modest little treasures, and oceanfront trophy houses. Wildlife includes a continually changing population of birds ranging from plovers, redwing blackbirds and killdeer to egrets, gulls, great blue herons, and occasional snowy owls or ospreys.
